Hospitals may close doors as doctors' hunger strike spreads

By MARGERY GREENFELD and LIORA MORIEL Jerusalem Post Reporters

The doctors' hunger strike that started six days ago in Beersheba's Soroka Hospital is due to spread today to more than a dozen hospitals throughout the country.

Neither the finance minister nor the health minister were willing to comment last night on the doctors' fast, which threatens to paralyze the entire medical system by Tuesday.

Health Minister Eliezer Shostak will raise the matter in today's weekly cabinet meeting and press for an immediate resumption of the stalled negotiations, the ministry spokeswoman said last night. As to what is being done about the rapidly spreading hunger strike and the threatened shutdown of the country's medical services, ministry officials would only say that "the situation is being closely followed and that a "fallback plan" has been worked out in case of a mass medical emergency.

Labour and Social Affairs Minister Aharon Uzan, who met with the hunger strikers in Beersheba vesterday evening, said: "In light of what I have seen here, this matter will be the first topic of discussion at the cabinet session." The emergency room at Soroka will be closed this morning and emergency cases will be transferred via helicopter to hospitals in Jerusalem, Some of the 100-plus hunger strikers were hospitalized last night, and one doctor collapsed yesterday after five days without food. He is continuing the fast while being fed intravenously. The remainder of the the hospital's 250 doctors are expected to join the fast this morning, along with dozens of Kupat Holim Clalit clinic doctors from the Negev region.

In Ashkelon's Barzilai Hospital. 10 doctors yesterday joined their 20 colleagues who started fasting on Friday, and almost the entire medical staff is expected to join the fast this morning.

Hunger strikes are also expected to begin this morning at Beilinson Hospital (Petah Tikva); Kaplan (Rehovot): Meir (Kfar Sava): Rambam. Rothschild and Carmel (Haifa); and at the hospitals in Afula, Safad and Nahariya, Doctors at Josephthal Hospital in Eilat and Ichilov in Tel Aviv yesterday announced that they would start hunger strikes on Tuesday. Doctors at the four major Jerusalem hospitals (the Hadassah Hospitals at Ein Karem and Mt. Scopus. Bikur Holim and Shaare Zedek) will begin

fasts tomorrow morning.
The Treasury, which last night supported a call by Kupat Holim Clalit chairman Haim Doron to renew the wage talks immediately, noted that the problem is essentially that of the Health Ministry. One source asked rhetorically: "What would happen if every trade union went on hunger strike to achieve a higher salary - the lights could suddenly go out or we could be left without public transport,"

A delegation of seven fasting doctors from Soroka and two fasting doctors' wives will meet with President Chaim Herzog this afternoon in Jerusalem.

Most of these hospitals are already operating at full capacity. Their wards, especially internal medicine and geriatrics, are overcrowded and there is heavy pressure on the emergency rooms, due to the implementation last week of the "best possible care plan." The plan, which calls for thorough examinations, extensive tests and hospitalization of almost any patient who comes to the emergency room, has still not been officially lifted by the Israel Medical Association. But as more doctors begin fasting and reach the "72-hour-limit" — at which it is generally agreed that functioning becomes impaired - hospitals will be forced to drastically reduce their services or shut down altogether. In this case, it is almost certain that the IMA will abandon the "best possible care" plan.

But IMA spokesman Dr. Shmuel Friedman also warned last night that the hunger strikes "were not the final step." More action can be expected sometime this week, although Friedman refused to give any further details.

No date has been set yet for the crucial IMA central committee vote on whether to allow the Kupat Holim Clalit clinic doctors to return to full-time work immediately. The step was approved last Wednesday by a narrow majority in the Clalit fund doctors' national council, but awaits the final go-ahead from the

The IMA appeared over the weekend to be deeply split on the issue, with some prominent members arguing that in view of the imminent closure of the country's hospitals by the hunger strike, the clinic doctors must be allowed to provide at least some type of medical care for those who need it.

Friedman, however, who works at the Clalit fund's Beilinson Hospital and plans to join the hunger strike which opens there today, yesterday said flatly that the (Continued on Page 2, Col. 4)

Reagan may invite Jemayel to U.S.—a week before Begin

By WOLF BLITZER Jerusalem Post Correspondent

WASHINGTON. - President Ronald Reagan may invite Lebanese President Amin Jemayel to Washington about a week before Prime Minister Menachem Begin's scheduled talks at the White House, well-placed U.S. officials disclosed

The Reagan-Jemayel summit, the officials said, would be designed to underline U.S. support for the Lebanese government and for the agreement which has been sharply rejected by Syria and the Soviet Union. (See related item, page 2.)

Begin's visit to Washington, tentatively scheduled for the last week in July, will highlight the dramatically improved state of U.S.-Israeli relations in the wake of the agreement with Lebanon and Jordanian King Hussein's refusal to join the September 1 U.S.sponsored Middle East peace in-

According to the U.S. officials, Jemayel's visit could take place in mid-July.

They said Israeli President Chaim Herzog is planning to visit the U.S.. in September in connection with a United Jewish Appeal fund-raising tour. White House officials have made it clear that Reagan would be prepared to meet with Herzog. The major item on the administration's Middle Eastern agenda right now is the tense situation in Lebanon, especially determining ways to put increased pressure on Syria and the PLO to withdraw their forces from Lebanon together with those from Israel.

The director-general of the Israeli Foreign Ministry. David Kimche, continued talks at the State Department on Friday on those Lebanese-related issues as well on other regional and ters. "They compared notes on Africa and Central America," an Israeli official said.

On Friday, Kimche also joined Israeli Ambassador Meir Rosenne at his first meeting with Seceretary of State George Shultz since taking up his new post on June 5.

Shultz kept Rosenne for some 75 minutes, introducing him to the State Department's senior staff. According to Israeli officials, the session was largely social, although some specific items of mutual interest - especially Lebanon were discussed.

Kimche, earlier in the day, had continued talks with under Secretary of State for Political Af-

Vatican helped Nazis flee, says U.S. magazine

By LEON HADAR Jerusalem Post Correspondent

NEW YORK. - New evidence that the Vatican actively helped "scores. if not hundreds" of high-ranking Nazi war criminals to escape postwar Europe in the face of allied efforts to bring them to justice is reported in the current issue of Reform Judaism, the quarterly magazine of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations.

In an article titled "The Vatican and the Nazis." Charles Allen Jr. documents this charge, using once top-secret State Department reports obtained under the Freedom of Information Act to support it. Much of his information. detailing the role of numerous Vatican officials in helping SS leaders and other top Nazis fiee to South America, South Africa and the Middle East, is taken from a 36page report by Vincent La Vista, an American military attache who was stationed in Rome. The report was sent to then U.S. Secretary of State George Marshall in May 1947.

"Despite the report's startling findings about the Vatican's deliberate role in aiding and abetting the escape of SS and other Nazi genocidists," Allen writes, the State Department "did nothing to bar their flight from justice."

Among the escapees who enjoyed the protective benevolence of the Vatican and its "monastery routes," the La Vista report lists Klaus Barbie, recently extradited to France from Bolivia: Edward Roschman. the "Butcher of Riga" who went to Paraguay: Franz Stangle, comman-dunt of the Treblinka concentration camp who fled to Brazil; and Walter Herman Julius Rauff, inventor of the mobile gas vans used to exterminate 1.4 million Jews in Nazioccupied Soviet Russia, who escaped to Chile:

Allen says that the La Vista report detailed 22 "monastery" escape routes through which 27 Vatican prelates guided mass murderers out of Europe. Starting at several points along the German-Austrian frontier, the routes wound south and west into northern Italy to the ports of Genoa, Naples and Bari. The La Vista report gave the names, political backgrounds, addresses and even telephone numbers of the 27 Vatican operatives, whose leader was identified as Msgr. Alois Hudal, (Continued on Page 2, Col. 2)

Pope minces no words in praising Solidarity union CZESTOCHOWA (AP). - Pope John Paul II yesterday hailed the Polish workers' uprising that gave birth to the Solidarity labour movement, saying it touched the "hearts and consciences" of people around the world. The pope's remarks, made soon after his arrival at the Jasna Gora monastery here, were his strongest words of support for the banned Solidarity union since he returned on a visit to his native land on Thursday. "The pictures that went around the world in 1980 touched hearts and consciences," said the pontiff, referring to the August strikes of that year that spawned the Soviet bloc's first independent workers' organization.

The pope called the commitment of his countrymen "a testimony which amazed the whole world, when the Polish worker stood up for himself with the Gospel in his hand and a prayer on his lips." In his address to members of the Baltic diocese of Szczecin, the pope spoke from a giant altar erected outside the monastery. A vast crowd estimated at nearly one million people packed an open field and woods near the shrine to hear the pontiff's panied by large demonstrations of Solidarity supporters in Warsaw, including a march by 50,000 the night of his arrival, the largest unsanctioned demonstration in Poland since martial law was imposed.

Before leaving the capital yesterday the Pope said a prayer at a monument to Jews killed in the Warsaw Ghetto uprising.

On his way to Czestochowa, John Paul, at an open-air mass in Niepokalanow paid homage to Poland's newest saint, Franciscan monk Maksymilian Kolbe, who propagated the faith through the mass media and gave up his life for another man at Auschwitz.

Publications produced by Kolbe before World War II and his death in the Nazi death camp Auschwitz recently became the centre of a controversy involving Poland's bishops and government spokesman Jerzy Urban, who said the Kolbe publications contained "anti-Semitic filth. Meanwhile, preparations continued for a meeting between the Pope and Solidarity leader Lech Walesa.

Walesa and his family still had no firm word on where and when the audience would take place, Walesa's spokesman, Konrad Maruszczyk said. A Vatican spokesman would say only that a meeting would not occur before to-

Reluctant government officials. who in the past had referred to Walesa as a "former leader of a former trade union" with no standing for a papal audience, agreed on Friday to a "strictly private" meeting.

Later Crippen reported: "We're just straightening out the cabin up here. There's not much exciting going on here."

'I'm not so sure I'd go along with that." Ride interjected. "We agree with you, Sally," mis-sion control replied. "We think it's pretty exciting." The crew was to undertake the first major assignment of the flight later yesterday when they deployed the Canadian ANIK communications satellite.

The satellite, which will supplement one launched earlier, can be used to absorb growth in East-West -telecommunications in southern Canada and carry new broadcast services. Kollek lashes out at Satmar rebbe

By MICHAEL EILAN Jerusalem Post Reporter

Jerusalem Mayor Teddy Kollek has attacked the visiting Satmar rebbe, accusing him of inflaming tensions within the city.

Kollek spoke of the "severe consequences" of the rebbe's visit at a meeting of his One Jerusalem city half faction on Monday.

Rabbi Moshe Teitelbaum, leader of the largest anti-Zionist ultra-Orthodox community, arrived in Israel from New York on June 7 to visit his followers. He is due to leave the country on Thursday.

Kollek accused him of increasing tensions between secular and ultra-Orthodox residents of the city on such issues as Sabbath traffic on the Ramot Road and mixed secular-

Orthodox neighbourhoods. His visit also increased tension between different ultra-Orthodox communities,

NEW YORK. - Mayor Ed Koch said last week that Israel had been "forced to sacrifice one of its most competent military leaders," former defence minister Arik Sharon, in order to prove "that Israel is a democracy." Sharon's ouster was aimed at satisfying "enlightened world opinion and many of our Jewish liberals," he said.

Speaking at a luncheon of the Emunah Women of America organization, the mayor said that some American Jews have "Knuckled under to the pressures of the State Department and the anti-Israel sentiment that has grown in our land."

Among American Jews he said, "there are people who run for cover, afraid of being accused cf dual loyalty. They want to bury their heads in the shtetl."

He called the Reagan administration "fair-weather friends of Israel." and referred in scornful tones to U.S. Defence Secretary Caspar Weinberger's comment before the American Jewish Committee that he had "no animus" against Israel. "Can we believe our government when it tells us it has 'no animus' toward the State of Israel?" the mayor asked, adding: "their love to Israel lasts as long as Israel does exactly what the State Department wants it to.

The urology, plastic surgery and ear, nose and throat departments were closed over the weekend because the majority of their staffs have been fasting for more than 72 hours. The hospital's surgery and maternity wards are also virtually shut down since the majority of the anesthesiologists and surgeons are no longer able to function properly.

Most of Soroka's 250 doctors - a handful of them Moslems, who say that they normally do not celebrate the Ramadan fast - are set to join the six-day hunger strike this morn-

Dr. Ram Ishai, head of the IMA. and himself a Negev resident, joined the hunger strike yesterday. Ishai told The Post that he does not expect "the callous finance minister to react before Tuesday, by which time most of the doctors in Israel will be fasting and several hospitals will be closed."

Mayor Eliahu Nawi came to visit the doctors yesterday, but left quickly after an argument with enraged citizens who wanted him to take a clear-cut stand on the matter. Three Alignment MKs -

Many doctors felt that their hunger strike, while drumming up much needed public support, was becoming a political free-for-all. ..: · They said that since they do not discriminate between patients of one party and another, no party should treat them as pawns

The doctors were joined over the weekend by their spouses, many of whom also fasted, and by their children. Several patients are also fasting, against their doctors' orders, to protest against the doctors' low wages.

Hundreds of concerned citizens also came to show their support. Histadrut Secretary-General Yeroham Meshel and Kupat Holim Clalit chairman Doron came to Soroka on Friday afternoon to plead with the doctors to end their hunger strike, to open the primary care clinics and to let the Histadrut handle their wage demands. All three offers were soundly-rejected doctors called Meshel

"patronizing" and "out of touch with the situation" — and walked Yesterday afternoon, opposition leader Shimon Peres was said to be expected at Soroka, probably because of a prankster's ploy, and several citizens stood by to hand him their red Histadrut membership books in protest. Peres did not arrive, but the political arguments went on.

Shultz fails to persuade Syrian FM to meet for talks

WASHINGTON (AP). - Secretary of State George Shultz tried hurriedly last week to arrange a meeting here with Syrian Foreign Minister Abdul-Halim Khaddam, but was told it was impossible because of "scheduling reasons," a State Department official said Fri-

"It was felt that it would be useful, after looking at the issues and at the situation, to have him come," said the official, referring to continuing Syrian objections to the agreement by Israel to withdraw its forces from Lebanon in return for security concessions.

The official said the invitation was issued "very, very recently," but that Khaddam replied that had scheduling problems and couldn't make it.

As recently as last Wednesday afternoon a department official said: no specific invitation had been in sued to follow up on a general of by Shultz to receive Khaddam Washington.

That offer was accepted in princip ple during Shultz's visit in Damascus in early May, before a signing of the Israeli-Lebanda agreement.

Jemayel seeks referendum to head off break-away plan

Jemayel yesterday called for a referendum sponsored by the Arab League in Lebanese territory occupied by the Israeli and Syrian armies to determine their allegiance.

"I wish the Arab League to conduct a referendum in Lebanon, especially in regions that are outside Lebanese rule, to ascertain their allegiance to the Lebanese govern-ment in all its policies," Jernayel told the London-based Saudi week-

found overcrowded Jerusalem Post Reporter

The Health Ministry last week decided to stop referring patients to the Ein Gedi facility for the chronically ill in Tel Aviv, after a ministry inspection revealed that the institution has 22 per cent more patients than its 27-bed limit allows. The private facility, which serves both the ministry and health insurance plans, was also found to have an inadequate nursing staff and substandard maintenance, the ministry spokesman said Friday. The inspection team from the ministry's chronic care division, noted a general atmosphere of "poverty and distress" in the facility. The ministry is working with the chronic patients' association to relieve the overcrowding by sending some patients to other longterm care facilities.

The ministry's legal adviser is investigating the possibility of suspending Ein Gedi's licence and closing it.

New clashes feared at City of David

By ABRAHAM RABINOVICH Jerusalem Post Reporter

The sixth season of excavations at the City of David are to begin this week with archeologists braced for a possible renewal of demonstrations by haredim who fear that ancient graves may be violated.

Examinations were recently conducted by the Army Chaplaincy Corps in the vicinity of the excavations at the behest of the Education Ministry - whose Antiquities Department must license the dig but archeologist Yigal Shiloh, who directs the excavations, said last week he has not received the results. He said the probes have not been made within the disputed site "Section G."

Antiquities Department director Avi Eytan said yesterday that the digs will proceed. He declined to say whether a licence has been issued. "Things are being dealt with."

Rabbi David Shmidl of the Atara Kadisha Society, who has been leading the fight against the excavations in "Section G," said that the chaplaincy probes have uncovered clear evidence that the site had been an ancient Jewish cemetery before the archeological excavations began. Shmidl is also a primary consultant to the Satmar rebbe on the problem of tombs in Jerusalem's Tel Arza District where the rebbe wishes to build a residen-

It is common practice among the ultra-Orthodox to build atop a rockcut tomb - not over an earthen grave - with an air pocket left above the tomb to ensure purity for cohanim in the building.

However, the Satmar court, which is stricter than most in its interpretation of religious law, said Shmidl, might not want to build above tombs, even though halacha permits it.

In addition, if many graves are discovered on the site, laws pertaining to a cemetery may apply which would make the problem even more

The Satmar court bought the site for $3 million hoping to build 350 apartments on it, but haredi officials have said that there will be no building if Halacha does not permit

West German police battle rioters

WEST BERLIN (AP). — Police using tear gas, Water cannon and billy clubs battled thousands of protesters yesterday when two unrelated demonstrations exploded into violence. Police said "agitators" at a demonstration by 6,000 leftists rioted in an immigrant quarter of West Berlin, attacking officers with rocks and bottles and torching cars. Police battled the mob with tear gas and clubs in the Kreuzberg district and clashes continued for several hours.

Authorities were unable to report the number of injuries or arrests. "After the demonstration, groups of agitators just started throwing stones and bottles at police who were there in case of trouble," a police spokesman said. In the northern city of Celle a meeting of radical rightists, including some neo-Nazis', triggered a demonstration by about 900

Two arrests were reported. The Berlin demonstration was by members of the Alternative List political party and other leftwingers angered by an earlier demonstration in Kreuzberg by conservatives. The Alternative List is an organization of mostly labourers, vouths and foreigners.

Alternative List protesters battled riot police dispatched to disperse them after some members began torching cars and construction trailers and throwing rocks and stones.

Police said they did not know why the violence erupted.

They said it came a couple of hours after several hundred members of the Hamburg-based Conservative Action Group demonstrated outside a Kreuzberg

Provisional accord in EEC on British share of budget

STUTTGART. — Leaders of the 10-nation Common Market yesterday hammered out a provisional agreement here on the sticky issue of the British budget contribution. The summit's West German host, Chancellor Helmut Kohl, British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, French President Francois Mitterrand and their seven colleagues broke for lunch after more than five hours of intensive talks.

The British sources said the figure of 750 million ECU (European Community Units) rebate on Britain's 1983 budget contribution was close to the figure of two-thirds of the average British refund over the past four years that Thatcher

But unofficial, widely published reports said Thatcher was seeking the equivalent of $1.2 billion, about twice what she reportedly got.

French and West German sources said that acceptance of the rebate figure for Britain was conditional on complete agreement on an overall package for financing the Common Market, which officials have said is on the verge of bankruptev.

Britain remeins opposed to plans for financial reorganization favoured by other states in the com-

British officials said their acceptance of the rebate figure were also provisional and dependent on agreement on other aspects of the Community's finances. (AP,

White House more positive on Soviet arms proposal

WASHINGTON (AP). — After a little fumbling, the Reagan administration responded positively Friday to a Soviet arms-control proposal, saying it would be "interested in talking" about the implications of anti-ballistic missile

The proposal, which the administration confirmed was made "in the last several weeks," was made public on Thursday in a speech by Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko before the Supreme Soviet.

Spokesmen at the White House and State Department at first read identical statements charging Gromyko's assessment of East-West relations "misrepresented the U.S. position on virtually every issue."

"Such distortions do not contribute to a productive dialogue between our two nations," said Alan Romberg at the State Depart-

After reading the statement, deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes was asked to comment on Gromyko's daim that the U.S. had not responded to a Soviet suggestion for talks between Soviet and American scientists and specialists on "the possible implications of establishing a large-scale

Speakes said he would pursue the question, and late Friday, the White House issued an unsigned reply saying, "We are interested in talking to the Soviet Union regarding the implications of the new defensive technologies which both sides are developing."

The brief White House statement did not specify where or how the discussions might take place but said, "There are a number of possible existing forums for such discussion. We are considering how best to engage the Soviets on this issue, thus it would be inappropriate to say more at this time.

Black miners win pay hike. equality pledge in S. Africa

JOHANNESBURG (AP). - The South African mining industry granted black miners pay hikes of more than 13 per cent on Friday and promised to work for the end of white privilege. After the negotiations, the first between the world's richest mining industry and a black union, Cyril Ramaphosa, generalsecretary of the National Union of Mineworkers, said: "I would say we didn't do too badly."

The Chamber of Mines, which negotiates wages for the mining companies, had only recognized Ramaphosa's union eight days ago. The chamber has set wages for the more than 400,000 black gold miners for the last 100 years.

Ramaphosa's union, which repreents only 30,000 miners, had demanded 30 per cent pay rises, expanded fringe benefits including paternity leave for the migrant work force and elimination of a law reserving the best jobs for whites.

A chamber statement said the wage increases would apply to a 465,000 black, mixed-race and r dian miners under its jurisdiction The chamber said the increase granted on Friday continued policy of closing the wage between whites and other race The chamber has said it has reduce the gap from 22 to 1 in 1970 to 6 te before the latest hikes.

Sikh militants kill policeman NEW DELHI (AP). - Two Sikh militants invaded a police station in Punjab state yesterday, shot one policeman dead, and then escaped by motorcycle, the United News of India reported.

The assassination occurred one day after the Akali Dal, a militant Sikh political group, called a statewide railroad blockade, prompting the government to cancel all trains in the northern state to avert a possible bloody showdown. UNI quoted an eye-witness as reporting that the two unidentified assailants, one of them wearing a pink turban, attacked a police station in the city of Phagwara, and killed a criminal investigation agent by pumping bullets into his chest.

SHAKESPEARE might have been summing up the Weltanschaung of Professor Victor Turner, one of the most eminent social anthropologists in the world, when he wrote: "All the world's a stage, and all the men and wome: in it merely players...."

Turner, head of the Department of Anthropology at the University of Virginia, a Fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences and at present in Israel as the Albert Einstein Fellow of the Israel Academy of Sciences and Humanities, has written landmark studies on rituals, pilgrimages and celebrations in all kinds of societies and in every continent; he can use the esoteric jargon of his mystery as skilfully as any anthropologist on the face of the planet. Thus he writes authoritatively about such matters as "comparative symbology," "semiotics" (or semiology) and the move from "Liminal to Liminoid, in Play, Flow and .

But beneath his awesome academic aspect, a Richard Burton is struggling to get out and, indeed, often does. For instance, he teaches ethnography by making his classes act out such rituals as weddings, instead of just reading about them. They prepare a script, sets and costumes, and cast teachers and students to play out the ceremony they are studying. They take it all as seriously as if they were in Fame. Most of the anthropological work Furner has done in recent years reflects his profound love of theatre, and his tendency to see everything from Watergate to a dance by the Ndembu of northwestern Zambia as a performance on the stage of the world for his delectation.

No psychoanalyst is needed to explain why this is happening to him; il is a conscious process, not a sub-conscious one. He explains a himself in his introduction to his book From Ritual to Theatre - The Human Seriousness of Play.

"The essays in this book chart my personal voyage of discovery from traditional anthropological studies of ritual performance to a lively interest in modern theatre, particularly experimental theatre. In a way, though, the trip was also a 'return of the repressed,' for my mother, Violet Witter, had been a founding member and actress in the Scottish National Theatre, located in Glasgow, which aimed, in the 1920s, at being the equivalent of, if not the answer to, the great Dublin Abbey Theatre,"

Victor Turner's father was an electronics engineer, and because their two cultures were incompatible, his parents divorced when he was 11. As a result of his dual heritage, he comments, "I slithered between arts and sciences, sports and classics. I won a prize for a poem on 'Salamis' at age twelve, which excited the derision of my schoolmates for many years and forced me to win attention as a soccer player and cricketer of some violence — I shamefully acquired the proud title of 'Tank' — to erase the stigma of sensibility."

HE TAUGHT for many years at Manchester University, where several Israeli anthropologists went for post-graduate studies. In the early 60s, the university set up the Bernstein Trust for the completion of research projects in Israel by Israelis, and Turner was slated to become the field director. But he received an appointment at Cornell University, and therefore could not take it on.

"As a result," he says, "I only came to Israel for the first time in 1980, to address the Israel Amhropological meeting: I also gavee lectures at several Israeli universities. Rather to my astonishment I must confess, both Bar-Ilan and the Hebrew University applied independently to the Israel Academy for me to be made an Einstein Fellow and I am spending some months at each university."

Being in Israel has enabled him to study the rituals and ceremonials of the three great monotheistic religions. He and his wife Edith spent Purim at Bnei Brak with the Viznitscher Hassidim, Lag Ba'Omer at Mount Meron and Safed with thousands of Moroccans and Hassidim, Passover with the Samaritans on Mount Gerizim. They attended the Easter Saturday Mass with the Patriarch of Jerusalem, and the Armenian ceremony of the Holy Fire with the Armenians. Edith participated in a Sufi ceremony near Hadera. Last month they visited the Samaria village of Yama, with Dr. Yosef Ginat of Haifa University two days after Seif e-Din Zeidan, convicted of murdering his sister, came home after being pardoned by President Navon. "Dr. Ginat had played a considerable part in getting him the pardon." Turner says, "He wrote many personal letters to Navon, and interested Israel Television in the story. The family were very grateful to him, kept thanking him over and over. We joined them in a big meal, but I would not say that they were celebrating yet. The young man was very quiet: he seemed bemused, he had not yet taken in that he was Teally free, that he was not having from gaol." Although she does not have a university degree, Edith Turner has accompanied her husband on all his trips, has collaborated in his work for years and has co-authored many articles with him, as well as a major book, Image and Pilgrimage, "She does all the legwork, takes measurements and performs routine chores, is responsible for most of the photographs we take and talks to the women, while my major chore is to drink beer with the men." THE GREAT Lag B'Omer gathering at Mount Meron was of special interest to the Turners.

"Ever since I became interested in cross-currents of symbolic systems like ritual and theatre, I have joined in pilgrimages. I have participated in such events in Mexico, Ireland, Brazil, India and Japan...

"In all these pilgrimages there are different elements. There is the mystical search for intervention with the Almighty to attain some blessing, or remedy some ailment or distress. But there is also the element of theatre, of drama, of producing a show, of having a party.

"It was perhaps significant that, by coincidence, the holiday was being celebrated at the same time as the Labour Movement was holding its May Day procession in Tel Aviv. This embodied the same elements of ritual and drama as Lag B'Omer, although superficially the mystics of Mount Meron and the workers of Tel Aviv may appear to be poles

"A curious feature on Mount Meron was the hospitality I saw extended by Moroccans to Hassidim, by Hassidim to Moroccans, even though they seemed so different. The Moroccans had special Arabic music they were playing, the Hassidim were chanting in Yiddish while they danced. Yet one old Moroccan woman said to me with a rather sly twinkle in her eye. 'We call them whites. You know why? Because they call us blacks."

TURNER BELIEVES that there is a tendency to ignore the popular reactions to religion by concentrating on the metaphysical and philosophical aspects.

"For many people, religion can be fun," he maintains. "Ritual is a non-verbal form of communication, like theatre, ballet and dance, in which the body as well as the mind is used to convey a message and enjoyment. It is based on a special kind of knowledge; perhaps it has something to do with the difference hetween the left and right American nation. "Sixty different cultures are represented," he says, "We have read over six galleries. Washington has provided the stage for many a celebration. America's ceremonies of respect, festivity and rejoicing - our Independence Days, presidential inaugurations, state funerals, our national triumphs and tragedies - have all been most signally celebrated in the capital. Celebrations involve musical composition, choreography, the enactment of ritual or dramatic roles, special types of attire, special food and drink. At the exhibition we are showing the American celebrations and their symbols, in contrast to those of other nations." Underlying much of Professor Turner's present work is a belief that different peoples may be able to enjoy the cultures of others.

"Systems of communication and transportation have become very good." he says. "For instance, today we can enjoy the foods of peoples from all parts of the world in one city. Chinese food, Italian food, French food, Indian, Polynesian you name your fancy, some restaurant has got it. Why shouldn't we have the same thing with cultures? As we grow more flexible, we should start to enjoy cultures of choice as well as cultures of birth. The underlying excitement of theatre is common to all."

I HAD a house guest recently: a fat little fellow, rather strange-looking and a bit odd in many ways. He was smart, though. When he came he spoke only some foreign language I had never heard of; but after a couple of weeks, he could speak English almost as well as me and he could read The Jerusalem Post almost as well as me. He was interested in everything; asked a lot of auestions.

One Sunday, at breakfast (like the ad said: Sunday's breakfast: coffee, toast and Elkins), he put down his paper and asked, "What's a judge?".

I got the dictionary and read the definition to him: Judge: (noun) 1. Public officer appointed to hear and try cases in courts of justice. 'What's 'justice'?

XX.

I looked it up. Justice (noun) 1. Just conduct, fairness; exercise of authority in maintenance of right. "Got it?" 1 asked my guest.

He hesitated. "Well...maybe not quite. Look," he said, "it says in the paper that a man was tried by a judge for 'assaulting' a Broadcasting Authority official. The judge fined him a lot of money. But the judge himself said he would have set fire to the Authority's headquarters, 'I would simply take a match and set fire to the building,' the judge said."

"So?". "So, if that's what the judge would do, how could he punish the man for only throwing coffee at the official. Is that justice?".

"Maybe not," I said, "but that's the law." "Isn't law and justice the same thing?" "No," I said.

LARGEST BOARD OF GOVERNORS MEETING CONVENES TODAY

The Annual meeting of Technion's International Board of Governors opens today in Haifa. Major policies for the Institute, budgets and the development program for the years ahead will be determined. The current Board meeting is marked by several distinguishing facts: it will be the largest Board participation in the history of the Technion, attended by close to 150 members and official observers from ten countries; moreover, some 160 friends and supporters of Technion organized in missions from Boston, Chicago, Detroit, Los Angeles, Miami and Washington, D.C., will also be present in Haifa this week.

The Governors will receive Professor Josef Singer's report marking the completion of his first year as President of Technion. Some 17 special events, including dedications of buildings, laying of cornerstones and other festive activities, are scheduled.

Guest speakers during the week include Minister of Defence, Professor Moshe Arens, and Minister of Science and Development, Professor Yuval Ne'eman.

SINGLE immigrants to Israel are forced to wander like gypsies from apartment to apartment and the situation is reaching crisis proportions. Over the past 10 years, 50 per cent of alim from Western countries have been single. But as soon as they leave the absorption framework and look for a place to live, they - like all other olim find themselves to be victims of an implacable, officially sanctioned discrimination which, in time, drives a significant proportion of them out of the country.

Housing in Israel is not planned with single people in mind, says Werner Loval, chairman of the national housing committee of the Association of Americans and Canadians in Israel. As of May 1, 1983, the Ministry of Absorption offers immigrant families a IS1.4 million mortgage for home purchase in Jerusalem: it offers immigrant singles IS670,000, demands from them a substantially higher monthly rate of repayment (a greater percentage of which is linked to Israel's inflation rate), and does not subsidize repayment of the mortgage as it does for couples.

Both the Ministry of Housing and private contractors build family-size apartments, so that one- or tworoom homes are almost impossible to find. Moreover, as recently highlighted in the report of the State Comptroller, there is a severe shortage of government apartments for olim in Israel's central region (where most of them want to settle). because of the diverging philosophies of the Ministries of Housing and Absorption.

FOR OVER thirty years Rampal has dominated the concert stage (and record market) as one of the world's top flautist. For nearly that long, he has also been one of the Israeli public's favourites. "AACI realizes that native Israeli singles face similar difficulties in obtaining housing. The most sensible solution would be a combined effort by the Housing Ministry, the Israel Lands Authority and major developers to build 40 to 50-metre moderately-priced apartments for both olim and vatikim. Until this is done, olim singles, most of whom come to Israel without substantial savings, are at the mercy of a chaotic and expensive housing market. It is not uncommon to find singles paying half of their income for rent. With parents who rarely give emotional - let alone financial - support, it is no wonder that single olim often despair of finding a permanent housing solution in Avraham Daus (1902-1974) was represented by four songs. His concise and powerful musical language underwent a considerable simplification in this country, but it lost none of earlier intensity. Emilie Berendsen, in excellent vocal form, imbued the songs with remarkable expressive depth, while David Bloch took care of the piano part with sympathetic authority.

Baruch Kobias' (1895-1964) miniatures for two violins showed noteworthy familiarity with the medium and some original ideas. Lovingly played by Ani Schnarch and Yitzhak Rashkovsky, they may prove a worthy addition to the original educational repertory.

The virtues of the two large-scale works, on the other hand, were less apparent. Erich Walter Sternberg (1891-1974) wrote a ponderous, uneventful exercise of a sonata. Leopold Kandor (1902-1976) s an interesting yet erratio artist, for whom the formal balances of a piano sonata remained a closed book. The sincere efforts of Yigal Tuneh, Idith Zvi and Sara Fuxon-

WITH A BIT of imagination, the setting could fit a fairy-tale: year in and year out; old manuscripts collect the dust in the silence of a dim basement until one day the spell is lifted and beautiful music, encasted for so long in yellowing pages, joyously fills the concert hall.

The reality is known to follow less poetic routes. Yet it does take a near miracle for some of our composers' music to get a hearing. And, unlike an average miracle, it requires a formidable effort.

Light One Candle

By CHARLES HOFFMAN Jerusalem Post Reporter

Nostalgia and protest were in the air in Jerusalem last Tuesday night when thousands of music lovers packed the Sultan's Pool at the foot of Mount Zion to hear Peter, Paul and Mary.

The concert was not intended to create the atmosphere of the 1960s, rife with tension over Vietnam and civil rights. But the combination of Israel's internal strife over Lebanon and the good-as-new voices of the trio led many to make the com-

Peace Now, activist Dr. Janet Aviad said that Peter, Paul and Mary's newest song Light One Candle, was intended to be a contribution to the peace movement in Israel. "Peter Yarrow, (Peter of the troupe) wrote the song in the wake of the massacre at Sabra and Shatila, to express his strong feelings of opposition to the war in Lebanon," she said.

Before it was performed here last week, Aviad and two other people met with Peter, at his request, to examine the song and weed out any "sensitive" passages. The song was performed twice, once as an encore.

"Although Peter identifies with the goals of Peace Now, he wanted to be sure that no one would be offended. After all, they were brought here by the Jerusalem Foundation, not Peace Now. The song, however, is pretty low-key and people can read their own meaning into it.

The group wanted this song to create an impact similar to that of Blowing in the Wind, which inspired the protest movement of the 1960s. They feel songs can make a powerful contribution to the peace ef-

Some fans at the concert said it resembled a class reunion of the 1960s. But like many reunions, it was clear that many who had once marched together then have since taken different paths. The extremes were highly visible," said one fan. "It was American olim in Peace Now and Gush Emunim recalling their common past."

The song Light One Condle, was performed with much of the audience holding up lighted matches, candles and cigarette lighters. Here are some of the lyrics, according to Aviad:

TEL AVIV. - Perhaps the best description of Expomedical '83 would be "the exhibition for the medical specialist and the scientific tools he uses," rather than the official "international exhibition for hospital and medical equipment and pharmaceuticals."

Expomedical '83, which opens at the Tel Aviv Fairgrounds tomorrow for four days, is the type of event which recognizes that medicine is moving gradually away from being an "art," in which each physician makes a diagnosis based on his own training and experience. It is based on the concept of medicine as a science, where the results of tests made by expensive "tools" provide identical information to any physi-

Of course, the physician must interpret this information. But there has been a tremendous shift in the past few generations from the romantic image of the country docfor with his little black bag, to the specialist's specialist, an outgrowth of the information explosion. Faced with the problem that no one doctor ean ever hone to absorb all information, each doctor is narrowing and deepening his knowledge in a selected field. For example, surgery, which was once a general speciality, has now become a catch-all phrase for many surgical sub-specialities. To name a few: chest, open heart, eye, hand. brain and orthopedic. And many other specialities are rapidly developing sub-specialities.

All this has been made possible by the "tools," which allow one physician to concentrate on an ever smaller part of the human body, or on a system within the body, such as endocrinology.

The problem, of course, is that all among the specialists, and this is also one of the reasons for holding an affair like Expomedical '83, It gives the various splinter disciplines a chance to come together and see what is going on in the fringes of their speciality, and to try to put together a picture of the patient as a whole human being again.

Thus, crudely put, one specialist becomes the "tool" of another specialist. Twenty-six medical associations are to meet during Expomedical '83 for scientific discussions. Each specialist is encouraged to drop in to hear another group, as well as to keep up with the advances in his own field.

A few of these associations are those concerned with endocrinology, cardiology, surgery of blood vessels, radiology, plastic surgery, gastroenterology, pathology, clinical biochemistry, nuclear medicine, hemotology and blood transfusions, 'gynecology, eyes, children, nephrology, critical care, family medicine and urology.

Each group will probably also discuss its special non-medical problems. Thus the anesthesiology association will probably discuss the "bad press" it has been receiving recently.

As their newsletter says: One hears very little in the press about our activities in easing pain and in saving the lives of thousands. But the rare mistake we make results in headlines. "The boundaries between misjudgment and criminal negligence are becoming blurred," the newsletter says.

The newsletter continues, "Are we the only ones who make mistakes? Are there no accidents in other departments, such as surgery, pediatrics and gynecology. Why don't we hear about them?" 'Of course, all these associations too often the patient gets lost in the past have held scientific meetings at regular intervals, but they rarely held them jointly. Thus, the current exhibition of equipment. pharmaceuticals, supplies, uniforms and professional literature is the "magnet" which will attract all these associations at one time. In other words, a commercial exhibition - for the exhibitors are there to sell their wares - in itself is a factor in advancing medical knowledge.

Two past expomedical exhibitions have been held, a few years apart, but now it is planned to hold them every year. As Prof. Dan Michaeli, head of the Tel Aviv Municipal Hospital Service said: "Once we had a new generation of medical technology every 20 to 25 years, now we have a new generation every three years or so. Not only must the doctors keep up with their scientific knowledge, but also with the increasing number of new tools available."

The 207 exhibitors (including 37 from Israel) will present goods from a dozen countries, and they include such internationally known firms as Du Pont Pharmaceuticals, Bausch & Lomb, Merck, Hewlett Packard, Eli Lilly, Abbot Diagnostics, Ciba Geigy, Dow Corning, Vickers, Key Medical, Revion Health Care Group, Zeppelin, Union Carbide. Miles Laboratories, Knauer, Bayer, Schering and Upjohn.

Many of these companies which have their headquarters in one country, such as Du Pont in the U.S., will be represented by their subsidiary in another country.

In addition, there will be many Japanese firms, some of whose names are not well known in Israel. such as Toitu, K.T.K., Nihon Kohden, Aloka, Topcon, Koken, Fukuda, and Kamiya Tsusan

WALL STREET WEEK

More and more believers in U.S. economic recovery

NEW YORK (AP). - The U.S. economy's budding recovery from the recession is attracting more and more believers on Wall Street.

Recent evidence has many analysts in the financial world convinced that the upswing, which began slowly and tentatively in the first quarter of the year is now picking up speed.

Albert Wojnilowe at First Boston Corp, told the firm's clients last week that the recovery "has acclerated dramatically in both statistics and spirit."

The government supplied the statistics: Factory use at 72 per cent of capacity last month, up from a low of 67.4 per cent last November and housing starts at an annual rate of almost 1.8 million in May, their highest level in nearly four years.

Wall Street, meanwhile, contributed heavily to the spirit as stock prices soared to new highs. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials climbed 46.08 to 1,242.19 last week, hitting an all-time closing high of 1,248.30 on Thursday.

WEEKLY STOCK MARKET REPORT

A real rollercoaster, but it ended on a rise

By JOSEPH MORGENSTERN Post Finance Reporter

TEL AVIV. - "It was a rollercoaster ride, and thank goodness we ended the week moving upwards," stated one observer at the Tel Aviv Stock Exchange last week.

In one sentence he neatly summarized the week's activities. They began on a bright note, with broad rises in all sectors. Then a sudden gloom enshrouded the trading hall for the next two days as prices fell sharply.

During one of the sessions more than 160 shares fell by margins of more than 5 per cent. Triggering the downward move was the publication of the International Monetary Fund report which pointed out the bleak picture of the country's economy.

However, on Wednesday morning everything changed. The banking community let it be known that it stands firmly behind the favoured shares, and as a result on Wednesday and Thursday the rollercoaster ride resumed in earnest, upward.

The announcement of a 5.5 per cent rise in the cost-of-living index for May was a pleasant surprise, as it was only I per cent below most estimates. After the announcement index-linked bond prices eased.

One of the brightest aspects science-based industries. Not one have they carved out an important niche in export markets, but froi il time to time the development of the prices of their shares has been sne tacular. Last week it was the turn? Laser Industries Ltd. for a perfor mance which will be remembered The company produces the Sharplan carbon dioxide surgiei laser which is considered the best c its type in the world. Its shares fe more than a year now have bee traded on the American Stock & change in the range of $7-$13.

On the Tel Aviv Stock Exchang shares soured to a high of $31.5 in Thursday night. Triggering th dramatic rise was the recommends tion of a brokerage house on Wa Street and an improved carning report. What the future holds fo the Laser shares is anybody's guest but in the meantime they are the darlings of Wall Street.

Once again most analysts exper that the local exchange will begin the week on the upside. Mutual fund purchases are providing the necessary backing for positive market performance, and it would seem that the public is ready it make itself felt.

This is mainly because of a drop in defence exports following the Lebanon war, he said. Increased mand by the Israel Defence Force to fill depleted stocks has meant drop in production for foreign customers, he said.

Patt said that the IDF had at first planned to refill its emergency warehouses within two years. Due to tension in the north however. this will have to be done within! months, he said. Thus there is less material available for export, he explained.

ris Only 2 men and only 2 women in contention

LONDON (Reuter). — Jimmy Connor sets out tomorrow to become the first American since the great Don Budge in 1938 to retain the Wimbledon men's tennis title. John McEnroe and over-confidence appear the only serious threats.

The defending women's champion, Martina Navratiloya, once of Czechoslovakia and now of Dallas, is also expected to win again. And as in Connors's case, one player, Chris Event Lloyd, and complacency are the main dangers.

On known form and assuming he is fully recovered from a shoulder injury, McEnroe, the talented and turbulent New Yorker who is seeded second, is the one player with the strokes and know-how to beat Connors on the grass courts of the All-England club.

McEnroe's sometimes boorish behaviour tends to obscure the fact that he is a surpremely intelligent tennis player and it will not be through lack of mental application that he fails to suppress the power and panache of Connors's game. The records show, however, that McEnroe has beaten Connors only once on grass, at Wimbledon in 1980. In their four other meetings on this surface, including last year's Wimbledon final, Connors has devastating straight sets victory in London last Sunday.

Perhaps the most effective way of playing Connors on grass was that devised by another American, Arthur Ashe, in the 1975 final when by soft-hitting and creating wicked angles he brilliantly drew the sting from Connors's game, "He feeds on speed so I gave him junk," Ashe

If the 24-year-old McEnroe, who has played under Ashe in recent years on the U.S. Davis Cup team, does win through to meet Connors in the final on July 3, it may well prove to be a battle fought on the lines of the 1975 final.

ines of the 1975 final.

If the seedings work out Cormors will meet Argentine Guillermo Viles in one semifical and McEaroe will play Ivan Lendi of Czechodavakia in the other. But the seedings are unlikely to work out, based as they are on players' form on all surfaces rather than just grass, and Lendi and Vilas are poor on grass.

Sweden's Mats Wilander, the fifth seed who lost his French title to Yannick Noah two weeks ago, is another clay-court specialist who may have difficulty justifying his high seeding, in fact he may have trouble surviving his first-round match against John Fitzgerald of Ametrifia, Noah is not himself taking part.

If there is to be a surprise winner, he could well come from the lower ranks of the seedings or even out-side them. Johan Kriek, the South African-born American, who has won the last two Australian championships on grass, may be wondering how he comes to be only the 11th seed.

Australia's Mark Edmondson, unseeded despite reaching the last four a year ago, has the kind of bruising game that can demolish all but the very best on grass. Eighth seeded American Vitas Gerulaitis is prevailed, with his latest triumph a, unlikely to relish the prospect of having to play Edmondson in the second round.

Confident Glickstein

TEL AVIV. - Shlomo Glickstein, who will focus all of Israel's specific interest at Wimbledon, flew off to London on Friday to warm up on grass for his first-round singles match at All-England championships tomorrow against 13thseeded Brian Gottfried, of the U.S. The 31-year-old American-Jewish star has a most impressive Wimbledon record, having been a singles semi-finalist and quarterfinalist and also men's doubles winner and runner-up with Mexico's Raul Ramirez.

Undaunted, Glickstein takes that formidable record in his stride. "I am quite optimistic and feel that if I can produce my best I should be in with a good chance against Gottfried," Glickstein told The Post. "But of course Gottfried is a very tough opponent. I could well have done with an easier first-round Glickstein noted that his victories during the past three months over the World's No. 1 player Ivan Lendi and another half-dozen opponents all ranked above him on the ATP computer had given him a new sense of confidence in his ability to face players of that class. The Israeli champion, 25, is currently 33rd in the world singles rankings, a dozen places below Gottfried.

If he can get past Gottfried, Glickstein has a comparatively easy second-round match against either Czechoslovakia's Libor Pinek (87th on the ATP computer) or the Irish-American Matt Dayle (168th). In three outings at Wimbledow to date, Gilektein's only success in the main singles draw was a memorable five-set victory in 1980 over Ramirez. He went on to win the "All-England plate" for players beaten in the first two rounds of the main 128-strong draw.

Glickstein likes playing the serveand-volley game best suited to the fast grass surface of Wimbledon. He had some outstanding successes in grass-court competition in

Kapil—scourge of Zimbabwe

Post Sports Staff

Sri Lanka scored a fine 3-wicket win over New Zealand to complicate the qualifying groups but the iwo top teams in the competition, the West Indies and England, won handsomely in yesterday's penultimate games of the sectional play in the Prudential World Cricket Cup being held in England,

Sri Lanka recorded their first victory in the competition after dismissing the Kiwis for a paltry 181 (Del Mal 532). That was considerably more respectable than had once seemed likely. New Zealand were at risk of recording their lowest-ever World Cup score until a last wicket of partnership of 65 by Snedden and Chatfield saved them from the humilation. Sri Lanka were coasting at 120 for 2 but suffered a jittery middle order collapse. A splendid 62 not out from Roy Dias saw them home.

The real excitement of the day was at Tunbridge Wells where the gallant Zimbabweans, no longer considered under-dogs by anyone, allowed India off the hook and then nearly almost pulled off a fine come-from- behind win.

The performance to savour belonged to Indian all-rounder Kapil Dev. After India had slumped to 17-5 and were 106-7 at lunch Kapil battered the hapless Zimbabwean bowlers. He cracked six 6s and seventeen 4s on his way to 175 not out, a new World Cup record, which hoisted India to 266 for 8 in their 60 overs.

Zimbabwe put up another valiant effort with Kevin Curran striking a lofty 73. But when he was out late in the innings - caught at the second attement in the deep by Shastri the Zimbabwean dream died with him. They were all out for 234, giving India a 32-run victory. Needless to add, Kapil Dev was named Man-of-the-Match.

England pummelled Pakistan to a convincing seven-wicket victory at Old Trafford. Pakistan 232-8 (top scorer was Javed Miandad with 67 before being brilliantly run out by Botham England 233-3 (Fowler 69. Tavare 58). The West Indies continue to show they are heading back to top form right in time for the semi-finals as they bid for their third successive title. Australia did not disgrace themselves as they amassed 273-6 at Lords. Hughes, Hookes and Yallop all struck half-centuries.

Bur it was never going to be enough runs when they came up against the majestic West Indian batting line-up. Haynes made 39, Greenidge scored 90 and the unmatchable Viv Richards was at his inimitable best as he rounded off a great 95 not out to see the West Indies home by 7 wickets in 58 overs.

Late last Thursday, Sri Lanks nearly pulled off a fine victory but failured towards the end and were beaten by Pakistan by 11 runs. Pakistan 235-7; Sri Lanks 224 all out.

Zimbahwe's wonderful fight to score a double over Australia ended 32-runs short when they were howled out for 240 in suply to the Australia 272-7. A mighty 84 by Zimbahwe wickle David Houghton carned him the Man-of-the-Match award.

Among them was Calvin Peete. whose deadly accuracy came to the fore. Peete, who has led the PGA tour in driving accuracy for three seasons, birdied three of his first five holes, got another on the back and was even par for the tournament, one shot back, with two second-round holes to be played.

The leading total of 141, one under par, was established by Mahaffey and Rassett early in the day.

But with 36 holes to go — in some cases more — that lead was far from secure. Banched within two shots was a group that included defending champion Tom Weston, PGA champion Ray Floyd, Masters winner Seve Ballesteros of Spais and Hai Sutton, winner of the tournessment players championship earlier this season.

After all players complete 36 holes, the field is cut to the low 60 scorers for the third round.

Mr. Begin's partner

AS THESE LINES are written, Deputy Prime Minister Simha Ehrlich lies in grave condition in a Jerusalem hospital. It must be assumed that whatever happens in the hours ahead, the stroke that afflicted Mr. Ehrlich, has removed him from the political scene. For his family, colleagues and friends, Mr. Ehrlich's affliction is a cause of profound personal distress. But the central role he has played in the Begin Government, in coalition politics, and in the Likud makes his removal a matter of national significance.

Mr. Ehrlich was Mr. Begin's chief confidant on domestic political affairs. That relationship did not weaken after Mr. Ehrlich had to give up the Treasury portfolio midway through Mr. Begin's first term. Mr. Ehrlich's views did not always coincide with those of the Prime Minister, especially on matters of foreign policy. Nor was there any resemblance in their styles. However, the deputy premier was a completely loyal political partner. A shrewd and wily politician, his every maneuver within the Likud and within the first and second Begin Government coalitions was designed to strengthen Mr. Begin personally and maintain the Likud's hold on power.

That he mortgaged his own party's fortunes to these aims was a secondary consideration. For he was committed to stabilizing the Likud as a permanent political alternative to the Labour Party, though he also felt that the two big party blocs would ultimately have to join in government if the nation were ever to engage in serious economic reform.

In the Cabinet, too, on issues of national moment, Mr. Ehrlich was a voice of reason. But he never openly differed with Mr. Begin. He preferred the usages of private persuasion. This discretion gave him an image of ambivalence, but he understood it was the condition for his close personal association with the premier.

Bereft of this loyal political partner, whose counsel he valued and who freed him from many domestic political cares, Mr. Begin will now be without one of the key personal and political props of his regime.

The loss may make itself felt most immediately in the deterioration of the Liberal Party as a stable component of the Likud. This party has been chronically riven by factionalism. Mr. Ehrlich managed somehow to keep the disparate groups within shouting distance, a role he played not by dominating his party, but by parlaying his closeness to the prime minister and the recognition that outside the Likud, the Liberals would be impotent.

Without Mr. Ehrlich, the party's factionalism will become even more severe, perhaps to the point of endangering Mr. Begin's coalition. Certainly there is no obvious candidate to fill the moderating role that Mr. Ehrlich was able to play.

Unlike the Prime Minister, Mr. Ehrlich did not cut a wide public swath. He was the quintessence of a back-room politician. But more than any issue of substance, his removal threatens the future of the government and the coalition.

OUR JEWISH life is, full of paradoxes. On a general level, there are our achievements: everincreasing support for Israel from the Jews of the Diaspora, everimproving quality of Jewish education and social services in Israel. All are commendable.

But all this can be dismissed as "cheque-book Judaism" — a conscience-salve for the many whose dollars represent no real commitment to the preservation of Judaism and the upbuilding of the State of Israel. (And this without mentioning those who do not give at

Commitment is demonstrated not only by giving, but by involvement in planning and in raising money, by participating in social work and in the work of the Jewish Agency; by thinking about the kind of Israel that is emerging.

I am not belittling the contribution of the Zionists, political and

THE FUNDAMENTAL expression of 'Israel-Diaspora interaction has been money. The tremendous physical needs of the newborn state caused Israel's leaders to stress financial assistance. Diaspora Jewry responded magnificently. During the first years of the state, they supplied upwards of 25 per cent of Israel's financial resources. But parallel with the rapid development of Israel's economy and the increasing variety of its capital sources, there has been a steady decline in the relative contribution of Diaspora Jewry, which is now only marginal, representing only 3 per cent of the nations's financial resources. What is to be done in this situation, in which the amount of money coming from Diaspora Jewry no longer has much effect on Israel's struggle for economic independence, but the raising of that money contributes to a general feeling of alienation on the part of large segments of the Diaspora community?

Israel and the Diaspora are often in open conflict as to the budgeting of available monies. Diaspora communities claim that their needs are increasing while net incomes are declining. Israel claims that most of the money would not have been raised but for the charisma of Israel. Both sides are correct. The question is how to overcome the contradictions in Jewish life that have resulted from a disproportionate stress on money.

THE CHANGES in world Jewry as a result of the creation of the State not been matched by sufficient organizational and ideological restructuring. The potential impact of Israel as an active educational tool and not just a passive emotional symbol has been only partially realized. The amazing professional and intellectual capabilities of Diaspora Jewry as a group have not even been addressed by Jewish policy-makers.

The qualitative impact of Jewish brain power is the natural candidate to replace the declining quantitative impact of Jewish money power. Brains are the coin of the scientific age, as money was the coin of the industrial age. In the industrial age, money tended to attract brains; in the scientific age, brains tend to attract money.

Today, the university-trained intelligentsia - scientist, manager, technocrat - are clearly the most important class of Jews, in both numbers and potential. We must develop ways of exploiting their talents. Jews need practical mitzvot in order to justify their continued Jewish identity, Until now, the primary secular mitzva has been financial contribution. Unless we succeed in adding the talent contribution, we will continue to alienate many Jews. To do this, we must set practical challenges before the Jewish people, and present Israel as a concrete instrument for interacting with the modern world in a collective way. The problem about Jewish affairs in general is that they are so far removed from the everyday con-

IF WE Diaspora Jews are to be true partners, we must not accept our demotion to second-class citizenship. We must exert and preserve our right to speak out on what is happening in Israel — not as regards security, but on almost every other topic.

In particular, we must speak out on the quality of life, moral standards, and maybe even Israel's relations with the United States govern-

THE AGENCY is better today than it was 10 years ago. We are now going through a self-analysis. We have had retreats, and established commissions to look at ourselves inside out. For we have a moral obligation - both to ourselves and to Israelis - to evaluate the Agency, and maybe even to consider possible alternatives for administering and channelling donations to Israel. But here is another paradox. The very devotion of the Diaspora, its very commitment and service to Israel, elicits from many Israelis, not respect, but a kind of "you owe it to us." They tell us: "You're not here, so you can't help in any meaningful way."

This is both inappropriate and insulting. It seems to me that our very location outside the cauldron of the Middle East constitutes a most valuable vantage point for the beleaguered state. We can balance Israel's impulses, which certainly need greater control, more sophisticated diplomacy and intimate support.

cerns and activities of the average Jew. A war in the Middle East or a blatant anti-Semitic act in the Diaspora upsets him, but the daily activities of Jewish life hardly impinge on his individual concerns. We must allow Jews to express their collective identity in ways which reflect their individual interest and ability, while ideally serving universally significant aims.

FOR EXAMPLE, we may set as an all-Jewish challenge the transformation of Israel into the world's first Space Age society. The most technologically, scientifically, and culturally sophisticated society on the planet. A living example of the future of the human race: "A light unto the gentiles," if you wish.

In implementing this vision, Israel would become a world mini-power in high-technology exports. It would solve its balance of payments and its inflation; raise the standard of living of its citizens to unprecedented heights; and solve the social-ethnic

It would also guarantee the continuation of the qualitative between Israel and its hostile neighbours. If the Arab states were to make peace with us, this prospect could become an integral part of the development of the entire Middle East, thus allowing for future relations on a basis of equality and

Such a suggestion may seem farfetched, given Israel's present reality. But it is well within the potential of the Jewish people to realize such a transformation. And. indeed, the heroic challenge itself would be enough to awaken hitherto untapped resources,

The Jewish people has become the world's first post-industrial people, and as such may be the most developed people in the world. The Jewish people in Israel and the Diaspora is a major scientific power comparable to peoples five to 15 times her size, such as the Germans or the Japanese. If we succeed in realizing this potential, the future is

ISRAEL IS the shop-window, the showcase, of the entire Jewish people: the face the Jews show to the world. In this sense, it is also the self-image of the Jewish people; the way the Jews see themselves. The face of Israel is the face of Jewry. The draining of swamps and greening of the desert, the ingathering of masses of destitute refugees, the Six Day War and Entebbe are all Jewish property. All Jews benefit from positive gentile opinion and all Jews have their self-confidence and selfimage improved by these feats of

THE CENSUS

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post Sir. — I refer to Aaron Sittner's report of May 30 concerning the alleged call for a boycott of the census made by Rabbi Kaniyevsky. The report contains an unfortunate misunderstanding.
Rabbi Ya'acov Yisrael

Kaniyevsky, known as Der Steipiller. Ruv, did not publish a call for a boycott. His son, Rabbi Haim Kanivevsky, recently reminded the public of a ruling written II years ago in his father's name which referred to the 1972 census. That call for a boycott is not relevant to the present census because the system used this time is different in several important aspects,

In our opinion, the publication of the old call at this juncture is due to a misunderstanding: the three population and housing censuses carried out in Israel (in 1961, 1972 and 1983) do not involve a head count and the census takers are only collecting replies to specific questions, Moreover, from a halachic point of view, the census is for "a greater

MISCARRIAGE OF JUSTICE

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post

in The Post of June 2 that a Beersheba couple, convicted of severely beating and maltreating their ten-year old son in 1980 (!) were sentenced yesterday to threemonth suspended sentences and a IS5,000 fine. Adding insult to injury, Magistrates Court Judge Yehoshua Pilpel called the couple's acts "one of the most serious offences," and said that "parents who mistreat their children must be given harsh
